TFRA Action Plan 2009-2010...............................................................Appendix A
I. Introduction

The following represent the policies and procedures (hereafter, “operating documents”) that should govern and guide the operation of the aforementioned entity as a commission within ACPA. These documents are meant to be “living documents” that will evolve as the entity matures and are not meant to be exhaustive of every circumstance that should arise. In such cases, the best minds of the directorate, membership, and other persons as relevant should be brought to bear to address the issue, including whether any revisions or additions need to be made to these documents. However, any revisions or changes to these operating documents must be vetted and approved by the entity’s Directorate Body, the Commission Chairs group, and the ACPA Governing Board, in consultation with the current elected Coordinator of Commissions.

II. Name of Entity

This commission-level entity shall be known as the “Commission for Recreation and Athletics.” The commission may be referred to by this name or by the following abbreviation, “CRA,” in published documents and promotional materials within the Association or outside it. No other names or abbreviations are to be substituted.

III. History of the Commission

Initial conversations to develop a Task Force on Recreation and Athletics, which would later become a commission, were started by Scott Hirko in April 2007 following the joint NASPA/ACPA Convention in Orlando. Over the following year, working with Katie Sermersheim, in her role as Coordinator of Commissions, and Alice Mitchell, the incoming Coordinator of Commissions, a more formal proposal was created and shared with ACPA leadership. At the 2008 ACPA convention in Atlanta, roughly 30 individuals participated in a conversation about the need and role for such a Task Force. From that meeting, the proposal to create the ACPA Task Force for Recreation and Athletics was refined by Alice and Scott. It was approved by the Governing Board in July 2008. Hirko agreed to serve as the first Interim Chair in August 2008 and recruited individuals to serve in the directorate. The first directorate began its work in December 2008. At the 2009 Convention in Washington D.C., the Task Force initiated the work of becoming a commission.

IV. Mission, Purpose, & Goals of the Commission

   c) Understand and use assessment methods appropriate in determining the manner and degree to which learning and development has occurred.

2) Focus on creation and dissemination of knowledge – contribute to existing ACPA publications/materials and develop additional professional development publications/materials and opportunities that:

   b) Convey the unique contributions of a student affairs perspective to the appropriate bodies of knowledge on campus recreation and athletics.
   c) Facilitate and encourage professional’s examination of the bodies of knowledge on campus recreation in support of informed and effective practice.
3) Focus on the development of professional competencies paired with career advancement – assist in the articulation of knowledge and skills needed by student affairs professionals who serve in or address issues in campus recreation and/or athletics:
