In September of 2014, the Obama administration unveiled a new initiative aimed at preventing sexual assault and supporting survivors, known as It’s On Us. This campaign encourages individuals to take personal responsibility in preventing sexual assault. The initiative is divided into four key steps:

1. Be aware and educated. It’s On Us encourages everyone to be aware of sexual assault and its impact. This could involve reading up on the subject, seeking out information, and engaging in conversations about it.

2. Be proactive and involved. Participants are encouraged to take proactive steps to prevent sexual assault. This could include making pledges, participating in education programs, or taking part in social events that promote awareness.

3. Speak up and communicate effectively. Communication is a key component of the campaign. It’s On Us encourages people to speak up when they see or hear something that suggests sexual assault, and to communicate effectively about the issue.

4. Take action. The final step is to take action. This could involve volunteering, organizing events, or supporting survivors. It’s On Us emphasizes that everyone has the potential to make a difference.

The It’s On Us campaign also includes resources such as pledge kits, which can be easily incorporated into programs, training, or classes. These kits are designed to guide participants through the steps of the campaign and provide materials for educational sessions. For educators, incorporating the campaign into the curriculum provides an opportunity to educate students about sexual assault prevention and support. The pledge kits can be a great tool for starting discussions in the classroom.

Another way to get students involved with the campaign is to make an It’s On Us pledge to them. A simple pledge that can be made is: “I pledge to prevent sexual assault and to speak up when I see it happening.” This pledge is a simple way to start the conversation about sexual assault prevention and support.

In conclusion, the It’s On Us campaign is a powerful platform for taking action against sexual assault. By taking the steps outlined in the campaign, individuals can make a real difference in preventing sexual assault and supporting survivors. Whether it’s through education, awareness, or direct action, everyone has the potential to be part of the solution.
